R. F. D. Carrier Held Up
Carrier No. 2 of the Canfield P. O. was held up Wednesday about 12:30 p. m. at the home of Frank Corli just north of Cornersburg, when Mr. Corli intercepted his progress by stepping into the highway and in pantomime or mute language directed the carrier to turn his car into Corli's driveway, where several cars and other vehicles were already parked.

Obeying directions the carrier, after stopping his engine and dismounting, demanded to know why the U. S. mails were being intercepted and delayed.

In reply, Mr. Corli stated that he was merely complying with the demand of 23 ladies—members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Christian church at Four Mile Run who desired Dispatch readers to know that they, their church and their Aid Society are still extant and doing good and efficient work. That they are extant and doing good work was evidenced by the large tray of good things which was placed before the carrier and to which he did ample justice. Long life and success to the Ladies' Aid.

MUCH FOOD IN SMALL BULK
Wax Bread and Biscuits That Swell Like a Sponge.

The British "Tommy" when fresh bread is not available, is supplied with what he calls "dog biscuit." It looks just like that, being a thick cracker four inches square and weighing three ounces. Of whole wheat flour pressed solid, it might be described as a condensed loaf of bread.

The French have a "war bread" somewhat similar, which, when put into hot water or soup, swells up like a sponge.

The famous German "pea sausage" is composed of pea meal, bacon and fat. It was the invention of a Berlin cook, who discovered a process whereby pea meal could be made proof against deterioration. One sausage, eight inches long, yields twelve plates of nutritious soup.

JENA OFFERS CONTRASTS

Intellectually Progressive, But Keeps Old Customs.

Jena is a town of comfortable contrasts. Intellectually progressive, she is physically most conservative. The leaders of thought fling the most advanced ideas in social philosophy back and forth over their dinner tables, but those tables are laden with large meals cooked after the exact fashion that they have been cooked in German Bohemia for the last 200 years. The good professor will follow any intellectual concept that convinces his profoundly logical mind, but he will stick to his grandfather's style of pie in the face of all opposition and indigestion. Someone might trace an interesting and instructive relationship between German pie and German pessimism.

The contrast between old manner and new thought run all through Jena. Here is one of the most famous of European universities, here are philosophers and metaphysicians of the most daring and original, and all about them is an old picturesque city whose comfortable burgher class is quite untouched by all the intellectual fireworks that coruscate from the university grounds.

Jena has all the earmarks of a German university town—the little knots of gay capped students, the creeper covered buildings, the beer cellars, the gardens, the occasional dignified and black-clad faculty member pacing austere down the intimate old street, respectfully saluted on every hand. All this student life is overlaid on a solid and picturesque background of town life, of comfortable solid houses, of blue-eyed middle class maidens, of cool streets and flowery gardens.

Jena is elaborately fond of gardens. They confront you on every hand, carefully tended and luxuriantly flourishing. They bloom with a lavishness that is perhaps a product of the intellectual atmosphere. Jena is famous for her gardens, her glass factories, her beer and her great men. Any one of these industries carried to the point that they carry it in Jena, would insure the fame of an ordinary town.

INVENTIONS.

A lock controlled by electro magnets that can be operated from distant points is a French invention.

A tubular electric flashlight that can be mounted on any revolver has been patented by a Philadelphian.

A curved framework of wire loops has been invented to enable a player to hold a hand of cards conveniently.

Couplings for fire hose that are tightly locked by a quarter turn have been invented by a Massachusetts man.

A fly swatter that resembles a pistol and is operated by a trigger has been patented by its Michigan inventor.

The United States Army owns a patent for wireless equipment for aeroplanes that weighs but seven pounds and will transmit messages seven miles.

Government wireless stations have been planned for Indo-China that will be powerful enough to communicate with points more than 3,000 miles apart.

According to Section 56247, General Code, the tax commission of Ohio has ordered the budget commission of Mahoning County to hold public meetings in each taxing district, at centrally located schoolhouses or other public buildings, which are available without expense, with a view to giving the tax payers of the several districts an opportunity to attend such meetings.

An opportunity shall be afforded to any person present to be heard in support of or objection to any item in any budget affecting the taxing district and the taxing authorities of the district shall likewise be heard thereon at their own request.

Subject to unavoidable delays the Budget Commission will meet the Township school and village officials and tax payers in their respective districts on the appointed day and hour.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

"Out of the silence comes thy strength." Try to be calm for a few days, be silent, patiently listen and wait for the strength that is bestowed on all. Begin today.

ECONOMICAL LIVING.

Everybody is trying to be as careful as possible about wasting foods and not serving any great variety. If we could all so plan our lives using the Fletcher methods, we would have infinitely better health and save a vast amount of food thereby. One of the first rules is:

1. Do not eat until you are hungry even if you skip two or three meals. 2. Never eat when you are hurried, worried, unhappy or angry. 3. Consult the appetite before eating and eat just what is demanded at the time. 4. Hold every mouthful of food in the mouth as if it were the last you ever expected to get. Give the entire attention to it, taste it until there is no taste left. Enjoy it for all it is worth. The third rule is the one on which trouble might easily hinge, as those who have appetites have not all trained them to right living.

In discussing rule three with Mr. Fletcher one man said, "Can the indulgence of the animal appetites lead to temperate habits when history shows that they have always, from the beginning of time, led to gluttony?"

Why, if I followed my appetite, I should never pass a saloon and should always go to bed with my boots on every night." Mr. Fletcher replied, "Suppose you try it and see." The stipulations were that he should surrender without a struggle to everyone of his impulses to eat or drink, the one condition being that he should make sure that the impulse sprang from a physical demand and not a mental craving. He proved that it was a restless mind and not physical appetite that was calling for alcohol. The principle that excess springs not from our natural appetites, but from acquired cravings, teaches us that our natural appetites, rightly observed, understood and interpreted can be trusted to guide us aright. By following this teaching the desire for elaborate and expensive concoctions as well as condiments and liquors will be lost and an appreciation for the delicate and subtle flavors of such food as rice and bread will be developed. This man who advocates the indulgence of the appetite eats but one meal a day, and that is of the simplest foods.
